

As February arrives, with news of Presidential elections, refugee deportation, global upheaval and international uncertainty swirling all around us, strangely I found myself humming an old tune from the very first album I bought as a teenager back in 1987 by Wet, Wet, Wet. The tune, ironically, was from their 15-week number 1 hit "Love is all around us". It's a wonderful sentiment and a very catchy tune, but in these days of uncertainty and global strife, I wonder whether anyone now could get away with releasing a song with those lyrics. The world can be a very confusing place; in the past we've all seen and maybe even enjoyed participating in Mexican waves - but now it seems instead we've moved rather to Mexican walls.

February the 14th, of course, is globally celebrated as Valentine's day – "The Day of Love", which is second only to Christmas in popularity for the sending of cards, with approximately 1 billion exchanged yearly in the U.S. alone. This day, however, is so much more than just an excuse to send cards of fluffy hamsters hugging a heart and, whilst it is widely celebrated, most people are unaware of its origins.

In the 3rd century, the Roman Empire was ruled by Emperor Claudius II Gothicus, known to many as 'Claudius the Cruel', who was engaged in so many conflicts and wars that he began struggling to recruit adequate numbers of soldiers. Believing that Roman men were unwilling to leave loved ones behind, Claudius cancelled all marriages and engagements in Rome. Thousands of couples saw their hopes of matrimony dashed by the single act of this tyrant.

It was into this context that a simple Christian Priest named Valentine stepped forward and stood up for love and truth, challenging the status quo and secretly marrying soldiers before they went off to war. In 269 A.D., Emperor Claudius found out about the secret ceremonies and had Valentine arrested, imprisoned and beaten before being finally killed with clubs and stones and ultimately beheaded.

In our self-indulgent world, a love so evidentially sacrificial and selfless may sound like some impossible ideal – some unreachable gold standard of what love should be – but Valentine's great sacrifice was born out of his uncrushable certainty and personal experience of the greatest love ever shown this world.

"By this we know love, that Jesus laid down his life for us." (1 John 3:16)

C. S. Lewis, Christian writer of a profound book entitled The Four Loves, explains that, Biblically speaking, there are four different kinds of love: storge (affection between family or acquaintances), phileo (friendship), eros (intimate/romantic) and agape (the deep love of God). These four loves are all beautiful expressions of what it means to be human, created in the image of God – to love and to know love.

The great news for us and for our world is again found in some consoling words of truth spoken by Jesus which ends with an imperative plea from the Lord.

"As the Father has loved me, so I have loved you. Dwell in my love." (John 15.9)

In these shifting days, may you experience the deep rivers of God's love and find space to rest in that love.

APCM

This year's Annual Parochial Church Meeting will be held on Tuesday, 25th April at 7.30 at St Thomas. We will need volunteers to replace those whose term of office on the PCC is coming to an end, so if you feel that you would like to help shape the life of our churches and would be prepared to stand as a churchwarden or PCC member, please contact Angie Frith (447005).

We will also be looking for assistant churchwardens and sides-people for St Thomas. The responsibility of running our churches is lessened when it is shared so please do give thought to whether you could volunteer this year.
